Summary

I have worked since early 2014 as a UX Designer and Design Strategist, helping clients to find out their user's needs and in turn building the right thing for them. In 2015 I became a partner at Snijboon, a social design firm in Utrecht, facilitating Design Thinking workshops and projects. I've been a jazz singer for over 10 years, playing with many musicians popular in the Dutch jazz scene, as well as organising successful jazz sessions in Haarlem (Haarlem Jazz Underground, Stiels Sessions). In 2021 I founded Le Vaccin, a natural wine project, organising pop-ups, offering wine box subscriptions and organising private tastings for individuals and businesses.

My interests seem to be endless and I would like to stress I have no hobbies, only passions. I love to cook and to delve into complex recipes with a large history, sharing these with friends, my writing (about food and culture) has been published in several outlets since 2013 and my illustrations have been featured on posters and flyers. It's not that I am able to do anything or everything, it's just that I like to do almost anything and everything.

So give me a call or send me a message, so we can do anything and everything together :)

Espressotester

De Kleine Espressotest

Sep 2015 - Present (7 years 9 months)

In The Netherlands I rarely drank coffee. In 2015 I started an exploration where to find that Italian espresso experience in my own country, and fell into a seemingly endless rabbit hole of coffee knowledge. I started working in several coffee bars to understand the art of making the perfect coffee more deeply and I visited coffee farms to understand the process from berry to cup. This journey, I did not publicly share. What I do share, are annoyed reviews (in Dutch) about shit espresso I drink around the country. For your entertainment, but mostly mine.
